BIG MAY DAY FETE.

Arrangements for an immense Demonstration by Labor Unions in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Final arrangements have been made for a great labor demonstration May 1. The programme consists of a parade through the business section of the city in the afternoon and an entertainment in the evening, to conclude with a grand ball after midnight.

From the reports brought in by the various orders which will take part, it is expected that the turnout will be one of the largest ever seen in Chicago on May day. This celebration is in line with the labor movement in Europe and is under the auspices of labor organizations which are strongly socialistic in sentiment.

WOES OF A DRUG STORE.

Which Was Started Under the Crawford Opera House by Dr. Burckett.

The district court jury has returned a verdict of $500 damages in favor of the plaintiffs in the case of R. J. Mackey and W. J. Kelsner against Sheriff D. N. Burdge. The jury was out thirty-six hours.

Those unfamiliar with the facts in the case might imagine that the judgment was a great hardship to the sheriff, but such is not the case. Sheriff Burdge did not make the levy and attachment, on which the suit was based, blindly. When the Smith Drug company of St. Joe asked to have the drug stock of Mackey & Kelsner attached, Burdge made them give an indemnity bond to protect him. This is a customary practice in such cases. Accordingly the Smith Drug company and George Stansfield are on the indemnity bond. Sheriff Burdge will not be the loser, although the verdict is against him.

It is probable that the same parties may sue the sheriff for selling a portion of the stock to satisfy the claim of L. M. Crawford. When this attachment was executed John R. Mulvane was Crawford's bondsman in favor of the sheriff.

These cases and much more litigation all grew out of the stock of the Topeka Drug company's store in the Crawford opera house building. Dr. E. J. Burckett started the store.

Burckett came to Topeka last summer from Oklahoma with the idea that a drug store with a liquor permit in Topeka was more to be desired than a gold mine. People who knew him of old, however, prevented him from getting a permit. Then L. M. Crawford began an attachment suit for rent, and to avoid this Burckett claimed that he had sold out to Mackey and Kelsner.

Mackey and Kelsner said so too. Some creditors whom Mackey owed then began proceedings to take the property away from Mackey. This is as far as the ordinary mind is able to trace the litigation except that Mackey & Kelsner sued the sheriff for the value of the stock, claiming the sale by the sheriff was illegal.

IRATE ENDEAVORERS.

They Denounce "The Unparalleled Base-ness" of Father Phelan of St. Louis.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 29.—The recent attacks made by Father Phelan, the former Catholic priest of St. Louis, and editor of the Western Watchman, on the members of the Christian Endeavor societies of the United States, created considerable feeling here where the Endeavorers are strong. Rev. J. P. Dawson, of the Westminster Presbyterian church, last night made a reply from the pulpit to charges, during the course of which he denounced Father Phelan in the warmest terms. A great crowd of Endeavorers were present, and after the sermon the following petition was signed by nearly every one in the building:

"To His Reverence, Mgr. Satelli, Roman Catholic University, Washington, D. C.:

"We, undersigned Christian Endeavorers of Asbury Park, N. J., respectfully call your attention to the wicked, false and slanderous statements published by Father Phelan, one of your priests in St. Louis, Mo. The base and execrable assault is made on more than three million pious, earnest, godly and irreproachable young Christians in America. It is unparalleled in its baseness and enormity and should consign its author to everlasting infamy and contempt."

"We therefore ask that the creature from which emanated such charges, be degraded, unfrocked and deposed from the high position he has so recklessly disgraced. We are encouraged by the fact that this petition from the many protestations which you, as well as the Holy See, which you so ably represent, have recently made toward America and American institutions. This petition is most respectfully and earnestly made with full confidence that you will give it immediate and careful consideration."

Members of the local Christian Endeavor societies will at once circulate petitions for additional signatures, and when both Asbury Park and Ocean Grove have been canvassed, the petition will be forwarded to Archbishop Satelli at Washington.

MATSON MURDER CASE.

Trial Begins in the District Court This Week.

MATSON HAS LEFT THE STATE.

A Theory That Involves Him in the Murder—Nevels' "Confession."

Albert Matson will not be a witness in the Matson murder trial which begins this week in the district court. He was looked upon as an important witness and he had been regularly subpoenaed.

Matson is now in California. It looks very much as if Matson takes no interest whatever in the prosecution of his wife's assassin, Nevels.

Nevels in his "confession" said he had been hired by an emissary from Matson to get the papers which would make him the possessor of Mrs. Matson's property in case of his wife's death. While this is only one of Nevels' stories, the officers looked upon it as a possible explanation of the murder. Nevels, however, claimed that he had nothing more to do with the conspiracy than to burglarize the house and get the will, deeds and other documents, and that the murder was committed by others who were lured by the same emissary.

Matson was last seen in Topeka a week ago last Saturday. He told Sheriff Burdge that his health was poor and he feared he might have to go to California, he suffered so. Circumstances indicate that he started for California that same day, or at latest the next day.

The sheriff could have put Matson under bond to stay within reach during the trial, but did not think it was necessary to do so. It is now thought by many that circumstances may arise during the trial which will make the presence of Albert Matson greatly to be desired.

Matson's demeanor in Topeka has been such as to arouse suspicion. His first questions to the officers were not as would be expected, regarding the details of the murder and clues of the assassin, but were all about the property. He expressed no surprise, no regret at the murder, and the question of property appeared to be the only thing on his mind.

A JOURNAL reporter talked to him shortly after his arrival in Topeka, and he did not act as a man altogether sane. His nervousness was painful, and at times he lost all control of himself and his lower jaw dropped and wobbled helplessly. He insisted on being directed to the court house at once, and the reporter took him to the offices of the probate judge and register of deeds. He showed feverish anxiety as to the state of the property, and talked about papers he had in California, which would show that he was entitled to all the property. At no time did he appear interested in his wife.

MILLIONS AT EMPORIA.

The Loaning Business Evidently Reviving at That Point.

On Saturday a Kansas City concern organized under the laws of Kansas to loan money, and its charter, which was filed by the secretary of state, authorized it to have a capital stock of five million dollars.

Today an Emporia concern was chartered which will limit its capital stock to fifteen million dollars.

The last organized company will be known as the Great Eastern Co-operative Loan company of Emporia. Its directors are W. M. Doty, J. T. Merry, C. M. Neesler, J. H. Burgess and F. L. Perry.

A MATTER OF TASTE.

Anything Goes in the Headgear Line This Season.

IT IS THE SAME WITH WAISTS.

The Choice of a Hat All Depends Upon the Face, the Hair and the Caprice of the Wearer.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Do you like a flat hat with no perceptible crown? Well, fashion says you can have one, one so flat that there is scarcely a line to show where the crown leaves off and the brim begins. Do you think a high crown suits your peculiar style better? Kind and generous to an unusual degree, fashion gives you one with a crown eight inches high, pointed, or sugar loafed, whichever you prefer. Do you have a sort of face that needs no flattery? She gives you a flat, shovel shaped straw, which is converted into a tangle of branches and flowers, intermingled with gauze ribbons and perhaps gauze and bespangled butterflies. Does your hair grow luxuriantly over your brows and is your forehead smooth and fair? If so, there is a hat for you with a low, flat crown of lace over bright colored silk, with a tiny roll of velvet around it and a great, wide straw brim with a very decided upturned dent in it—yes, and three fluffy plumes upon it, two white as milk and one as black as ink. Does your face appear long and narrow? Then take what the goddess of fashion offers you in the shape of a Dutch bonnet, with flat top and great wide bows at each side. Sometimes there are perfect knobs of rosettes just behind the temples, and often the front is arranged in a double ruffle of beaded black lace, set with quilled satin rosettes. There will be some curled emu feathers of a dusty mottled brown set at one side or the other. Does your heart pine for the picturesque? For such as pine in that particular direction there are black straws, with a graceful rounding dip, like the movement of a three masted schooner on a heavy ground swell.

On these are set rich and glossy black plumes in empire style, generally three of a kind, though one falls backward, and one drops forward, while the third stands up straight, with only the curled tip left to float in the wind. To be quite picturesque these hats are faced with black, dark blue or green velvet, and a cockshell of the same is made as a point of departure for the plumes. Do you strive for the striking effects? There is a guinea hen straw, speckled in black and white, and on this is a bold quilling of heavy corded edged satin ribbon laid all around the crown, which is about as large as a trade dollar. This ribbon is of a lustrous chestnut brown, and standing up to bend downward at their own sweet will are the three raven tips, while another curls under at the back. And on the slightly curled edge of the brim is set a scarlet velvet bow. In short, do you wish anything you have never seen in hats and bonnets? If you do, you may find it now, and more too.

Time was when baby up to 6 or 7 years old wore nothing but dotted swiss, the finest cambrics and mulls, and in short, all the very finest and most exquisite of everything belonged to baby. Now the mother or big sister gets them, and baby must take up with the coarser things. Perhaps baby did not take as good care of the fine things as the grownups do, but somehow we are rather inclined to think baby is defrauded.

Mothers then delighted in sewing their eyes out and getting pains in their sides in making and washing the dainty little frilled and embroidered lawn frocks and underwear for their babies. And as these delicate little clothes could not be kept fresh and clean over ten minutes by the average baby it was as good as a title clear to mansions in the skies to have changes enough to keep them presentable a week at a time. The mothers then had no time to read, ride or rest, but think how sweet the children were!

Now the mother makes a Mother Hubbard out of the darkest green or brown diagonal or mixture, with a wide puritan collar, for one girl, and on the other she puts a gathered frock of heather mixture, with a blouse waist which is as easy to make as pie, or she gets a stout serge of dark color, or she buys heavy gingham, galatea or cotton crepe and sews them up as simply as possible. I do not quite like to admit it, but I fear the little girls and mothers, too, are better for the change. The son wears a suit as plain and compact as those of his sisters and looks nearly as well.

OLIVE HARPER.

SPRING COSTUMES FOR THE STREET.

The costume on the right is of striped chevrot, in drab and brown. The mantlette is of black faille, richly trimmed with cut jet and ribbon bows. The costume on the left is of tan box cloth with applique of a darker shade stitched on. The jacket is tailor finished and has smoke pearl buttons.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

HE WILL BE KING OF SIAM.

Slim Young Vadjira Vudh Is Made Crown Prince.

The young crown prince of Siam has been formally invested with all the insignia of his office.

He is only 16 years old and is studying at Ascot, England, so as to learn to be a king.

His name is almost as big as he is—Chowa Maha Vadjira Vudh.

The ceremony was performed in the drawing room of the Siamese legation at South Kensington, because it was not thought advisable to recall him to Bangkok on the death of the late Crown Prince Maha Vadjirunhis.

The young crown prince is the eldest son of King Chulalongkorn by his second wife.

Chulalongkorn's name is quite enough for several people. In full it is Phrabat Somdet Phra Paramindul Maha Chulalongkorn.

Korn Phra Chula Chom Klao Phra Choa Yuhna. Besides he has chosen another name, more familiar—George Washington.

The young prince may also choose the name of some foreign great man if he outlives his father and is permitted to ascend the throne.

Eight special envoys from the king brought over the sword. One of these was the boy's uncle, Prince Svasti Sabhana, and to him the king gave the commands for every detail of the ceremony.

All the representatives of the Siamese kingdom in Europe attended, all the men in gorgeous uniforms and the ladies in brilliant costumes. The crown prince wore the glittering uniform of a lieutenant of the royal bodyguard. The ceremony was very simple.

Prince Svasti approached the crown prince, and having presented the proclamation invested him with the insignia of the White Elephant. The commission and proclamation were read, and the investiture was completed with the high civil and military commissions which the rank of the prince compels him to hold.

Then followed congratulatory addresses in the Siamese language, the first being delivered by the Siamese minister in Paris.

The crown prince replied, and the ceremony was at an end.

Among the insignia presented were two magnificently jeweled swords, which have been in the possession of the crown princes of Siam for the last 100 years. One is of the rarest workmanship, set in rubies and emeralds on a background of pure gold.

The ceremony was too much for the little fellow, and after it was all over he was ill.

The Strength of a Jumping Mouse.

In proportion to its size, I believe the jumping mouse is the most active and powerful of all vertebrate animals. This tiny creature—go larger than a man's thumb—is from 2 1/2 to 3 inches in length, with a tail about twice as long as the head and body. It is therefore no larger than a house mouse, but it has light forequarters, strong hind quarters, very long hind legs—and it can jump from 8 to 10 feet. If a mouse weighing two ounces (average) can jump 10 feet, how far should a 100 pound boy of equal agility be able to jump? Figure it out for yourself, and when you have obtained the correct answer, you will properly appreciate the hind legs of this wonderful little mite.—W. T. Hornaday in St. Nicholas.

Ruth and the Horse.

Little Ruth was looking out of the window at the baker's horse. "Mamma," she said, "doesn't a horse use two of his legs for hands?"

"Why, no," mamma answered. "A horse doesn't need hands as we do."

"But, mamma," the little girl persisted, "I don't see what he does when his nose itches."—Youth's Companion.

How Do You Measure?

I'm just as tall as my brother Joe. For all he'll tell you it isn't so. Often and often he has said: He's taller than I by half a head. If you count that way, perhaps he is. But—my feet go down as far as his. So, wherever our heads may be, I say I'm exactly as tall the other way.—Sydney Dayre in Youth's Companion.

Defined.

Johnny Smart—Is there any difference between a duel and a fight?

Old Smart—Yes, indeed. A duel is between two people. When your mother and I have an argument, it's a duel. When your grandma sails into the controversy, it's a fight.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Young Schoolteacher.

The New York Sun says the youngest schoolteacher in New Jersey is Mollie Marapost, who assists Charles Dietz, principal of Public school, No. 3, in Maurer. She is 12 years old and is said to be a successful instructor.

A Close Grasp.

Smallworth—Old man Gripe, the chattel mortgage man, got a needle in his hand this morning, and the doctors had to cut it out.

Ford—Nothing strange in that. They would have to do the same thing had it been a nickel.—Indianapolis Journal.

Sure.

Mrs. Naber—Your husband is ill, isn't he?

Mrs. Shaller—Yes; quite ill.

Mrs. Naber—Do you think he will live?

Mrs. Shaller—Oh, yes; he's insured!—Boston Courier.

The Unkissed Kiss.

I have kissed the girls a plenty. Aged one year old to twenty. Kisses better far than honey, I can taste their sweetness yet.

But far dearer than the kisses Given me by kindly misses Is the ever verdant memory of a kiss I did not get.

For one winsome little fairy, With grace so light and airy, Kept me ever fondly saying, "I'll achieve my purpose yet."

But at length she shyly vanished With the gift for which I famished And she left me sadly sighing for the kiss I did not get.

Reader, pardon this digression, Does pursuit or does possession The greater pleasure bring? I really cannot say, and yet
